Grantmakers Income Security Taskforce

The Grantmakers Income Security Taskforce (GIST) is a national network of grantmakers interested in improving the economic well-being of low-income families in the United States. Established in 1992, GIST operates as an umbrella group for participating funders and philanthropic advisors, providing a neutral forum for strategic discussion and acting as a vehicle to encourage co-investment among foundations and facilitate cooperation among grantees on high priority issues.

Since 2011, GIST has been engaged in geographic mapping efforts to help identify and illustrate the various state groups and initiatives funders are working with and to help foster connections across these efforts. Visit our new online, interactive mapping tool at <http://gistfunders.org/geographicmapping.php>. To date, contact information on nearly 840 key groups in the states that national networks are working with has been collected from 29 networks.

This mapping tool aims to:

1. Raise awareness among funders of work in the states;
2. Enable funders to see linkages in their work and build toward greater collaboration across geographies; and
3. Enable funders to help their grantees at the national and state level increase collaboration on critical knowledge and skill capacity resources.

GIST updates the maps and creates a companion analysis annually in the Fall. We welcome your suggestions for additional national networks to include in our maps as well ideas for how we can improve this tool to help shape and inform grantmaking. Note that this is a work in progress. Not all key national efforts are represented here, and, state partners and priorities change.
